Multiple Uses of Urlis in Indian Households

The word Urli has its roots in the Tamil word 'urulai' which goes by the meaning "round". Urli is essentially a round vessel that is most commonly used in parts of South India. It is a traditional cooking utensil that can be made of bronze, clay, or copper.

In spite of being a traditional cooking item, Urli is still quite useful in South Indian homes. Here's how Urlis can be variously used for different purposes in your household:

1. For Cooking: Urlis are the best for slow cooking certain dishes. They are available in a variety of sizes. They are perfect for cooking delicious dishes like spicy biryani or Prathaman. The ingredients retain their original flavor and color when cooked in an Urli. It has the capacity of evenly spreading the heat throughout the vessel and thereby reducing cooking time.
2. For Decor: Many traditional items are often used in the modern-day decor. Urlis add a royal outlook to an otherwise drab setting. Urlis are often filled with water and brightly colored flowers are set afloat on the water to add a dash of color to it. This is a perfect centerpiece item that you can place in your hallway to maintain a calm and welcoming vibe. Urlis are often used as decor items in many hotels to add to the overall rich setting.
3. In Ayurveda: Urlis have been traditionally used for Ayurvedic treatments for ages. Herbal potions are prepared in Urlis. Essential oils are also prepared in Urlis.

Urlis have multiple purposes in which they can be used. You can get an Urli and use it for cooking or decor or if you are into Ayurveda you can prepare your potions and oils in it too. They are very useful owing to their multiple usages. Get yourself an Urli of the material of your choice today.
